Observation of a movement can be used to develop a new method of motor rehabilitation for children with upper limb paralysis or weakness.