Bridging to Adulthood Tips: Mental Health Resources for Young Adults with Disabilities

What is mental health care?
Mental health care addresses emotional, psychological and social wellbeing. Services may be with psychiatrists, psychologists, doctors, social workers, psychotherapists, nurses, occupational therapists, counselors, case managers or peer support workers.

The transition to adulthood is a time of change. Youth and/or families may want to speak to someone about adapting to new life roles and activities, relationships, mood, emotions, stress, or other topics.

Are you in crisis or need immediate mental health support?

- Go to the emergency department at a hospital or call 911 if you or someone else is in immediate danger or in need of emergency services. State if you are a member of the Vulnerable Person’s Registry and/or ask if there is a mental health crisis response team.

- Call Kids Help Phone 24/7 by calling 1-800-668-6868 or text CONNECT to 686868.

- Contact a telephone, online or chat crisis line. See CAMH’s Crisis Resource Directory, Distress and Crisis Ontario listings, or eMental Health Crisis listings.

- If you are a youth with an intellectual disability who is in crisis, also contact your Developmental Services Ontario (DSO) case manager to provide an update on your situation and seek additional support as applicable.

How can I search for mental health resources in adulthood?
The following resources are for mental health services in Ontario, Canada.

| Youth with Intellectual Disabilities         | 1. If you have an intellectual disability and are registered with Developmental Services Ontario (DSO)
   a. Speak with your DSO caseworker about potential supports such as Adult Protective Service Workers, case management, behavioural services, or respite.
   b. Caregivers should contact their DSO worker immediately if there is a change in their own ability to safely look after their young adult child with an intellectual disability at home e.g. due to caregiver or youth illness, injury or change in mental health status.
2. Consider looking for Dual Diagnosis programs, which focus on youth who have both intellectual disabilities and mental health considerations.
   Visit ConnexOntario Search
   - Click on ‘advanced search’
   - Enter your ‘municipality’ and age
   - Click on ‘services targeted to’ and under ‘Other Considerations’ select “Dual Diagnosis Clients”
   - Select ‘search’ to see local results |
| Attend relevant Transition Pop-Ups           | Register for Holland Bloorview’s Transition Pop-Up events under the Health and Wellness category. |
Mental Health Case Management

If you have a mental health condition that is “seriously affecting your life” you may want to further investigate the possibility of mental health case management through your local centralized access point:

- Toronto – The Access Point
- York Region – Streamlined Access
- Mississauga and Halton – one Link
- For other regions search the Healthline

Other things to consider:

- Ask questions to potential providers
  It’s your right to ask about a provider’s credentials expertise, wait times, office hours, communication style, experience with specific conditions etc.

- Consider accessibility of potential providers
  Is the service offered virtually, at home, in the community, at a clinic or in a hospital? Will you be able to physically access the building’s parking lot, entrance, washrooms, waiting area and rooms? Will the sensory environment be okay or overwhelming? Can the office provide accommodations such as extra time for mobility or waiting in a quiet area rather than the busy waiting room? Are there other personal considerations to help with accessibility?
